Stephen Lilley is a partner in Mayer Brown's Washington DC office and a member of the firm's Supreme Court & Appellate practice. Stephen focuses his practice on litigating appeals and dispositive motions in state and federal courts, developing strategies to manage regulatory and legal risks, and shaping policies in regulatory rulemaking processes. He is a member of the firm's privacy & security and CFPB groups.

Stephen graduated from Princeton University, summa cum laude, and Yale Law School, where he was a senior editor of The Yale Law Journal. He clerked for Judge Thomas Ambro on the US Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit and Judge Jeremy Fogel on the US District Court for the Northern District of California.

SELECTED EXPERIENCE

PHH Corp. v. Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (D.C. Circuit)

We filed an amicus brief arguing that the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau's order requiring a defendant to pay $109 million in disgorgement violated due process.

Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins (U.S. Supreme Court)

Under Article III of the U.S. Constitution, a plaintiff must allege that he or she has suffered an "injury-in-fact" to establish standing to sue in federal court.

United States v. Renzi (Ninth Circuit)

Our client, a former U.S. Congressman, was indicted on public-corruption and other charges stemming from his time in office and his operation of an insurance agency.
